

Church Hill Classics Launches New Commencement Frames

Church Hill Classics has launched a new line of commencement frames made of 100 percent recycled wood. The frames for Arizona State University and the United States Naval Academy commemorate the commencement addresses given by President Barack Obama to the graduating classes of 2009.

The Arizona State specialty frame features an engraved brass plate noting the president's address to the "Class of 2009." The official university seal is gold embossed on double maroon and black museum-quality matboard and the frame is Area moulding, made of recycled native wood. The other choice of frame for Arizona State also features an opening for the graduation's admission ticket.

Church Hill is offering a new line of commencement frames.

The U.S. Naval academy frame has an opening for a 5"x7" graduation photo and optional area for the admission ticket. There is a custom-minted medallion of the school's seal.
